

Banksy – British street artist. His works appear on the streets of London and else places in the world.

Banksy, despite many attempts to unmask him, continues to remain anonymous. Each photograph that allegedly depicts the artist features a different person. Based on this, many people are making the claim that Banksy is not one person, but a group of artists.

Bankse's work is to encourage people to reflect and think about the world around us and the situations that concern us.

The girl with the balloon is banksy's most famous painting. On October 5 at the British auction house Sotheby's in London, there was an auction of this painting, it was auctioned for more than one million pounds. Shortly after the auction ended, the audience heard an alarm and then the painting partially self-destructed. Both the audience and staff at Sotheby's auction house were shocked.

One of the Banksy's painting depicts two seemingly in love young people who instead of looking into each other's eyes look at their phone screens.

Banksy created many of his works during the COVID-19 pandemic, here are examples of some of them.

One particular

image is one depicting a young boy who is playing with. The boy chose a doll dressed as a nurse instead of superhero characters from children's cartoons. The image draws attention to the fact that during a pandemic, superheroes for people are nurses and doctors, people who take care of sick people. This Banksy work is an unusual way of expressing gratitude.
